Dr. Andrew Johnston (or “Dr. J”) is the owner of Johnston Consulting | DRJC, and is a sought-after consultant, teacher, and coach in corporate, government, non-profit, military and ministry contexts. He draws from diverse personal experiences as a counselor, professor, executive, and NCAA coach to strengthen some of the best-known organizations around the globe as well as schools, non-profits, and individual leaders around the corner. Corporate clients include Apple, Bridgestone, Carrier, CAT, Cisco, Genesco, Salvation Army, NCBW, Tractor Supply, Walgreens, and others.

Dr. J has a head for leadership and a heart for leaders. More than three decades of surviving and inspiring organizational and personal change have cultivated his deep appreciation for what it takes to make the most of people and projects, and his unusual commitment to encourage and equip those who take up the challenge.

Dr. J has served in many university roles including Associate Provost & Dean of Students at Belmont University, Honors Professor & Chair of the Non-Profit Leadership Program at Belmont University, and as graduate faculty member and Professor of the Practice at Vanderbilt University. He has held leadership roles in both profit and non-profit organizations and served on numerous boards and advisory groups. He holds degrees in Interpersonal Communication and Literature from Wheaton College; in Counseling Psychology from Auburn University; in Higher Education Leadership & Policy from the University of Tennessee; and has additional education in Leadership & Organizational Change from Harvard University.
